Stewardship 2021

Our stewardship campaign for this calendar year is underway and concludes in mid-February. Below are articles explaining priorities set by the Governing Board and offering suggestions on how the congregation can use its resources. Ideas on how to use our building as a resource are welcome. You will also hear from congregation members – in the eblast and Chimes (see Galyn’s story on page 8) and during worship – on how UUMC has affected their lives in a positive way. You’re asked to prayerfully consider all this and more when you make your commitment for 2021 on Feb. 14.

Leveraging our resources

As we grow into our new realities, the leadership of the church would like to keep you informed on the direction we will be taking.

This is an introduction to our shift in theology of stewardship, in other words, taking good care of our resources.

We will host a congregational Zoom webinar in January to present these concepts further and answer your questions about this shift.

Our priorities

The Governing Board – after hours of discerning who we are as a congregation, evaluating our possibilities and limitations and imagining the future – voted to set several priorities for 2021. They recognize...

Our world has changed and will not return to pre-2020.

We will continue to live in an expanded digital-virtual culture. The pandemic has changed how we work, gather and worship. It has

Epiphany worship series: Following Jesus is ongoing process

Our worship series for the season of Epiphany is “Follow Me,” from Discipleship Ministries of the United Methodist Church. It runs Jan. 17 to Feb. 14.

Discipleship Ministries describes the series this way:

The season of Epiphany has always been about seeing the light that is Jesus the Christ breaking forth into the world in which we live.

Seeing is only the first step, however. We don’t see the light of Christ the same way we see the beauty of the Grand Canyon, for example, or a particularly beautiful sunset.

While there is beauty in the presence of Christ, it is a beauty that calls forth a response.

There are many ways to respond to the presence of Christ. In this series, we focus on the invitation to follow. It is the mission of the church to make disciples, even as we are being made disciples. It is an ongoing process to follow Jesus; a transformation that continues through every stage of our lives.

We learned many lessons during tragic year of 2020

Happy New Year!

I'm excited to finally write the numbers 2021 because the tragic year 2020

Alicia Wood is over and we can begin to hope and reimagine our future together in 2021.

I'm someone who always looks for the silver lining in all situations, so even though I'm grateful to say goodbye to 2020, I would like to share positive thoughts about what we have learned from 2020.

I believe we have learned that change happens no matter how much we try to keep things the same and we can somehow adapt to change even though we don't like it.

I don't think any of us want to look into a Zoom screen any more than we have to, but we learned how to Zoom and FaceTime and do whatever else was needed to connect with family and friends.

I believe we have learned how much we need connection to people. As much as Americans say we are self-reliant and we can take care of ourselves, I believe 2020 showed us how much we need one another.

We are not meant to take all these emotions on our own. We are meant to be family and community in all its fullness.

I believe we have learned how to listen to the stories of people who look different than we look or have different experiences than we have had.

As we spent more time alone we realized we needed to listen to other people's perspectives and life stories as much as we listen to our own context.

I believe we learned as a church we need to shift and change for our current times and realities. This means finding new ways to truly live into our mission statement "Feeding God's People: Body, Mind and Spirit."

As the pandemic came into New York State we shifted the way we fed people's bodies.

We took our Friday pantry (now Food Center @ 324 University Ave.) and our Sunday breakfasts outside of our church building.

In doing so, we fed six times the people. We also fed six times the Spirits of the people we fed physically.

They felt so loved by our church and by God because we did not close but changed with a determination to feed God's people.

When we learned we could no longer gather as a congregation we once again went outside our church building to the internet via Facebook and YouTube. This shift fed people's Spirits.

We were able to connect through worshiping this awesome God and be a church family in spite of restrictions at least one hour each week.

As we moved to the internet, we connected with people we had never met before. Their hearts filled. Our blessings overflow.

We learned how to join and participate in Zoom meeting to connect not only with friends and family but to study the Scriptures through book and Bible studies. We shifted our small group gatherings to feed God's people's minds while we met the needs of our day.

I believe we learned how much the work of our church and church family means to us as I shed a tear every time I saw the large pile of mail at the office filled with donations, cards and letters encouraging me, Galyn and the entire staff to keep Feeding God's People.

As we turn the page to 2021, the leadership of the church is recognizing the shifts that have been made in our lives in more ways than any of us could have imagined, including the way we use our resources.

I'm excited to share more with you in January and February. I'm excited to continue to partner with you in ministry this year.

I'm overwhelmed with joy as we continue to live out our mission of Feeding God's People: Body, Mind and Spirit in new ways yet to come.

"Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have come to believe." — John 20:29

Blessings in your new year,

Data collected to enable a sustainable food distribution

Galyn
Murphy-Stanley

Throughout December we have been collecting additional ZIP code information from our guests who visit us for food and diapers.

We strive to learn more about how far folk are traveling to access our emergency distributions.

Seventeen ZIP codes across Onondaga County visited us at least one time in December for food and/or diapers.

Our intention prior COVID, was to service 3 ZIP codes that create the Southeast quadrant of Syracuse.

I, with Pastor Alicia, the Outreach team and the Food Bank of CNY will work through January to establish a more sustainable method to work, serve guests, finance our food purchases and manage our distributions so we can continue this manner of Emergency Food Distribution as long as necessary.

Our Sunday breakfast distribution thrives with new guests and diverse volunteers. We have moved this effort into the Narthex where folk can have more choices, more warmth and access to winter outerwear donations.

Breakfasts with coffee and additional offerings are still made available for guests choosing to remain outside.

Joyce and Katie Flynn have transformed this effort into a well-organized, prospering offering for some of our neediest guests in

* Christmas distribution

- Total Individuals who received food from UUMC’s Food Center: 4,153 (Food distributions & breakfasts) At our COVID safe Emergency Food/Christmas distribution on 12/18/20 we had a VERY successful first time ever distribution. We were able to provide 329 households with Christmas foods and a turkey. 1,344 individuals enjoyed Christmas foods gathered at UUMC’s Food Center @ 324. Interesting to learn that 109 more folk received foods at this Christmas distribution vs. the Thanksgiving distribution.
- Total number of families served who have children: 623
- Babies who received diapers on Dec. 4: 223. This equals 11,150 diapers distributed in 2.5 hours.
- Total guests who visited UUMC for Sunday breakfast: 223. This event continued throughout the month, without interruption, each Sunday.

our community. It has become a strong, reliable, thriving, well-rounded event.

This event has NEVER canceled, paused or rescheduled. Breakfast has been offered to anyone who needs a meal throughout COVID, throughout the holiday season.

Thanks: I struggle in remembering everything we’ve accomplished this year. My mom & dad told my sisters and me when we were girls that there is too much work to do in the world to dwell on frustrating, sad, angry moments.

They said: “Look forward!”, “How do you advance?”, “Let it go. Move on.” “Who is next to you? What is happening with them?”

Their teaching was so effective, that this is still how I think, this is how I work, these words are my mantra. I say them to myself, my kids.

I work hard to acknowledge important moments, take a photo in my mind and try not to forget.

We worked hard this year. Emotionally, physically, financially, mentally. We had to push ourselves every day, sometimes.

Sermon on the Mount is focus of next book study group

The next book study is beginning this week.

The book is Sermon on the Mount: A Beginner's Guide to the Kingdom of Heaven by Amy-Jill Levine. It's $12.99 from Cokesbury and available at other sites online. The class will meet at 1 p.m. Fridays and 6 p.m. Sundays starting Jan. 8 and 10 and runs through Feb. 12 and 14. A Lenten book study will follow. Please contact Mary in the office to register.

changed our economic and business realities with heavy burdens on the poor and middle class. Our reality has changed with sharp divisions that will affect families, communities and the nation.

We build on a firm foundation of achievement in 2020:

- Meaningful and effective on-line worship.
- ZOOM Bible studies
- Tuesdays Virtual Coffee with the Pastor, Wednesday with children, Thursday thought-for-the-day, Friday at the Food Center@324.
- Food Center @324 with Grace Episcopal and Temple Concord, serving six times normal pre-pandemic totals, to now 300 families per week.
- Sunday Bagel Breakfasts, moving outside our building and expanded four times, serving our neighborhood.

- Created an expanding team of volunteers from church and community.
- Increased our giving and financial support
- Stayed connected through our phone tree.
- Prayed and cared for each other through a difficult year.

Our UUMC resources: People – Building – Endowment – God’s love

Our priorities, in brief:

- Expand our Outreach ministries and discipleship ministries by feeding God’s people through our Food Center @324 and Sunday Bagel Breakfast, including more prayer and fellowship with those we serve. In the words of our Staff-Parish Relations Committee, “Living our faith through volunteerism” and service.

- Expand our virtual social media ministry through online worship, Bible study, social media platforms, Facebook, website, new digital outreaches.
- Use our resources wisely with a new way of thinking – people, building, endowment – with a new way of thinking to support and expand our ministries (see additional article, Leveraging).

The Governing Board invites everyone in the congregation to explore possible ways of fulfilling our 2021 mission and ministry.

We move Into this new reality with a strong faith that God’s love will move in us and through us to meet 2021 needs, opportunities and challenges.

Black United Methodists want denomination to address racial issues now

By Jim Patterson
UM News

Black United Methodists warn in a new book of essays that it’s critical the denomination deal with racial issues with a sense of urgency.

“I think there’s been a great deal of debate around human sexuality but no conversation, for the most part, around the part that race has played in the problems the denomination is facing,” said the Rev. Rudy Rasmus, senior pastor at St. John’s Downtown Church in Houston and editor of the book I’m Black. I’m Christian. I’m Methodist.

“I really think that now is the time where the conversation has to occur as to whether or not Blacks do have a future in the denomination. ... If America needs to face its dark past in race, I think it’s also time for the church.”

In the forward of the book, published in November by Abingdon Press, West Ohio Area Bishop Gregory V. Palmer said that each of the 10 essayists are saying “See me, hear me, deal with me.”

“The confluence of the everyday indignities of being Black in America; the outrageous, egregious, legalized lynching of George Floyd; and the unforgivable disparities exposed once again by COVID-19 have conspired together to create a seminal moment in America and in

The United Methodist Church — in which we must find the courage to say unambiguously Black Lives Matter. Black Life Matters.”

Palmer goes on to say that stumbling over those phrases is “beneath the gospel,” and dismissing the truth of the phrases because of efforts to “smear it and hope it will go away is a colossal failure of nerve.”

The autobiographical essays key in on the varied experiences of Black United Methodists. Included are chapters on being a lesbian, a stutterer and a Black preacher in a predominately white church.

When we serve others, they become interested in God

Leveraging – this is a new way of thinking about how our resources of people, building and endowment can increase our capacity for ministry. In leveraging we use our strengths to maximum advantage in creating additional resources of people power, building use and endowment growth. It is based on how we interpret Biblical scriptures.

Facts: There are increased needs and opportunities for ministry. Tithes and offerings alone will not be enough for most churches to continue to do meaningful ministry.

When we change our thinking about how to use our resources, two things happen, as put by Joe Park of Horizons Stewardship:

1. “More people become interested in the God we serve. When we serve others by meeting their physical, emotional and justice needs, we become the hands and feet of Jesus. They encounter God’s love through us and naturally become interested in learning more about the God we serve.”

2. “We advance the common good. When we invest our assets well, we become essential to the vitality of the community in which we exist and everyone benefits.”

Our theology for change: Jesus overturned the tables of the money changers not because money was being exchanged, but because of economic injustice: They were taking advantage of the poor by hugely overcharging for services (changing money) and sacrifices.

In the story of the talents, the servants who risked but increased the value of the talents entrusted to them were rewarded. The servant who wanted to play it safe planted his talent, saw no growth and was chastised.

Paul not only lived on gifts from his followers but also from his tent-making craft, a for-profit enterprise to support his ministry.

John Wesley, Methodism’s founder, was a prolific writer and publisher, creating ongoing income for his ministry. Most of us work to support our needs and to enable us to witness to our faith.

Bottom line: we need to supplement our tithes and offerings and expand our vision by...

- Exploring for-profit enterprises by UUMC that do not violate our values or mission and change lives in a positive way.
- Expanding how we use our building. Office space is becoming more competitive as work-at-home continues. Are there ministries that will attract funding or be self-supporting? Is there a for-profit enterprise for UUMC to launch using our space?
- Increasing our endowment to undergird our ministries by inviting our members to consider deferred giving through wills, bequests, life insurance, transfer of stocks and other planned giving options to ensure the important legacy of UUMC on our corner of Syracuse.

By leveraging our resources of people, building and endowment, we can increase our witness for Christ and shower more people with God’s love. So, let the conversation begin, and the ideas multiply.

UUMC and Food Center now known in different way in the city

Every minute of every day. We had to dig deep, to be our best selves, be courageous, get up and do the daily tasks often alone. Not get sick.

The gratefulness I feel for you all brings tears to my eyes. You each, in so many ways, became our best cheerleaders, our best advocates, our moral compass, our financiers, the energy to our efforts, our peers in work.

Your attention shone so very bright others noticed.

Please know that our city, its people, its leaders, know us. UUMC and its Food Center @324 is known in a way that is different from before.

COVID has transformed UUMC and us in so many ways. We have become integrated and supported into and by a hugely diverse number of people, institutions, programs and agencies in ways we wouldn’t have ever imagined a year ago.

Most of all I’m proud of us, all of us. We did the best we could together for each other and ourselves in many, many ways.

Let’s look back at 2020 with pride. We made it!

Galyn Murphy-Stanley: What was I doing at UUMC? Finding a home

By Galyn Murphy-Stanley

I've been the Neighborhood Outreach Coordinator at UUMC for almost 7 years. For about a year I've added the title Food Center Coordinator to my ever-morphing job. I was hired by Pastor Craig French to manage a mid-sized Food Pantry, to unite our Outreach guests with our congregation and to network/outreach into our community.

I was thrilled to have a job that met my and my family's needs, that was in the neighborhood I live in and allowed me an avenue for social justice efforts. My family laughed that I was now employed at a church.

In many ways working with the people of Syracuse was and remains the easiest and most enjoyable part of my job. I've done this work at all points of my career.

It was the building, the congregation, the staff and the routines of a Methodist church that were intimidating. Quickly, I fell in love with the building (it remains my greatest joy to work within such an amazing space). Margo Koten and Pastor Craig French were my first teachers of Methodist traditions. Tom Boll and Pastor Alicia Wood with Katie Flynn continue to help me, especially with the vocabulary (the Narthex is not called Narnia).

The staff have changed and evolved into a more user-friendly model as we've grown.

I, with the Outreach team, continue to find ways to unite all of our guests equally and fairly, but we have grown to be very successful in networking. Using our entire community as a resource for food, donations, money, labor, physical support, medical support for our guests, infant supplies, pet supplies and clothing, just to name a few resources.

Our network brings a lot of collaborative efforts benefitting UUMC and our guests, which expand our network further. Our network now includes publishers, media, reporters, universities and cooperatives. Teaching, lecturing, site visits and interviews are common for us. These folks share our efforts to a wider audience bringing more resources and attention to UUMC and our Food Center @324.

Now my family works with me very often. They bring their friends/acquaintances who need a foundation, have an interest, want an outlet. We understand Syracuse to be full of energy, interest and people who strive to create a better, more equal life for us all.

We found at UUMC a salt-of-the-earth congregation that works with us, that believes with us that together we are stronger, that there is enough for us all, that fairness is most important and that we are all worth the work.

Vito Sciscioli once asked me what an Irish Catholic girl was doing in a Methodist church. I think, finding a home.

Our Food Center @324 gets lots of donations, some of which cannot be used. Thanks to Joyce Flynn, 88 pairs of shoes that were not useful to our food center are benefiting Americans Serving Abroad, a local non-profit that does medical and educational mission work in Ghana and Uganda. The donated shoes will be used for women's economic empowerment programs in third-world countries. Joyce Flynn and Nick MacNaughton hold some of the shoes in the next photo.

Evelisse Viamonte, who led the sock drive, said this effort was one way to answer the question, “How can we try to meet our community’s needs?”
